Hello again.

This is the solution to which we turn: Another single and some exclusive previously unreleased material. More often than not, previously unreleased material is previously unreleased for good reason. That may still be the case here (we'll very charitably let you decide), but Black Earth and These Four Walls came very close to getting released a while ago, so it seemed only fair that they should be let out into the big, wide, virtual world.

We collaborated on this new remix of I'll Give You Electro, merrily throwing electronic ideas across the Atlantic, which turned out to be more practical than putting messages in bottles. The result is ironically less in your face electro, but by then it was too late to rename the song, so please forgive this slightly misleading advertising.

In case you're wondering, this is the second part of the I'll Give You Electro single. The first part contains another remix of the title track, which we called the single version, and three more exclusive songs. As these are digital singles, we're afraid that there isn't a special collector's slipcase to put them both in. Now please excuse us while we have a cup of tea and work out what we're doing next...
